Young sea lion doesn't hear call of the wild

By TAMARA GRIPII

TISH, A California Sea Lion that hauled up on Carmel Beach Tuesday, is just not ready to return to nature.

The yearling was first found stranded at Moss Landing State Beach Aug. 28. He had a few ailments and was nursed back to health by The Marine Mammal Center. But every time wildlife experts try to release Tish, he proves to be a land lubber at heart.

This time, Carmel beachgoers reported the exhausted young sea lion was sprawled on the sand, paying little mind to either people or dogs.

"One lady almost stepped on him," said Marine Mammal Center volunteer Dick Holm. "She thought he was a pile of seaweed."

After being summoned by Carmel police, Holm stayed with Tish until other volun-

Marine Mammal Center volunteers Dick Holm, Sue Whitaker and Ed Whitaker used boards to nudge an ailing sea lion, Tish, into a kennel on Carmel Beach Tuesday. He is being treated at a special hospital in Sausalito after beaching himself for the third time.

PacRep cuts performances, lays off staff

By TAMARA GRIPII

FORCED BY the slumping economy to make $200,000 worth of budget cuts, Pacific Repertory Theatre is dropping its last week of performances this season, letting two new employees go and even laying off its entire staff for November and December.

A decline in ticket sales and donor dollars hurt PacRep just as the theater was in the midst of an ambitious expansion.

"We were in such a delicate state of transition, going equity [hiring professional actors who belong to the actors' union] and increasing our administrative staff," said PacRep founder and artistic director Stephen Moorer. "Both of those are very difficult, given the sudden loss of cash flow and the reduction in contributed income."

PacRep had to act quickly to cut its projected $1.1 million budget this year to $900,000. In order to stay solvent, Moorer said the theater will have to lay off its entire nine-person staff for the last two months of this year.

Typically, PacRep's employees spend those two months working on the annual fundraising drive, setting up sponsors and producing brochures and other marketing materials.

Now, that work will be left to Moorer and PacRep's board

Thief hits collection plate at two churches

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A STRANGER walked away with $500 in offerings after noon mass at Carmel Mission Basilica Sept. 22 — the second such theft on the Peninsula in two months. Police are still searching for the tall, slim man with dark hair whom they suspect of stealing from the Mission and committing a similar crime at San Carlos Cathedral in August.

At the time of the theft from the Mission, a church member was guarding the day's collection which had been placed into a deposit bag. She was waiting in a small room called the sacristy for a volunteer to pick up the money, according to Carmel Police Officer Mel Mukai.

"That's when the suspect walked in from the altar area — just nonchalantly came in, grabbed it and walked out," he said.

Although she first thought the man, while unfamiliar, was part of the congregation and supposed to be there, the volunteer seconds later became suspicious and decided to follow him, according to Mukai.

The witness described the thief as a white male, 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet tall, weighing 155 pounds with dark, neatly cropped hair. He walked south through the chapel area and into the rear parking lot, where he got into a small white pickup truck with wide-set wheels and drove off, according to Mukai.

A call to CPD summoned Mukai to the scene about five minutes after the theft, but the man had already fled and a search of the area proved fruitless.

While no one could recall a license plate number or more details about the suspect, Mukai said the description matches that of a middle-aged man who stole about $60 in cash from the San Carlos Cathedral in Monterey Aug. 11 around 5:30 p.m.

"Apparently he was confronted by some employees who asked him if he needed any assistance or if he needed to see one of the pastors," Mukai said. "He left the office and later one of the employees was looking for the donation envelopes and could not find them, so they called Monterey authorities accordingly."

What high school graduates need to know ...

IS EIGHTH GRADE MATH TOO HARD?

By ROSE EVERS and PAUL MILLER

THIS WEEK, the state board of education announced almost half of California's 11th graders flunked the new high school exit exam administered last spring.

Throughout the state, educators, politicians and the media sounded the alarm. But lost in the chorus of concern was any information about the test itself: Just how tough is it?

Debbie Coco, director of curriculum and instruction at the Carmel Unified School District, said most Carmel High students didn't have any difficulty passing it.

The test was first given to ninth graders at CHS in March 2001. On their first try, 73 percent passed the math portion. Those kids don't have to take the test again.

And the students who didn't pass?

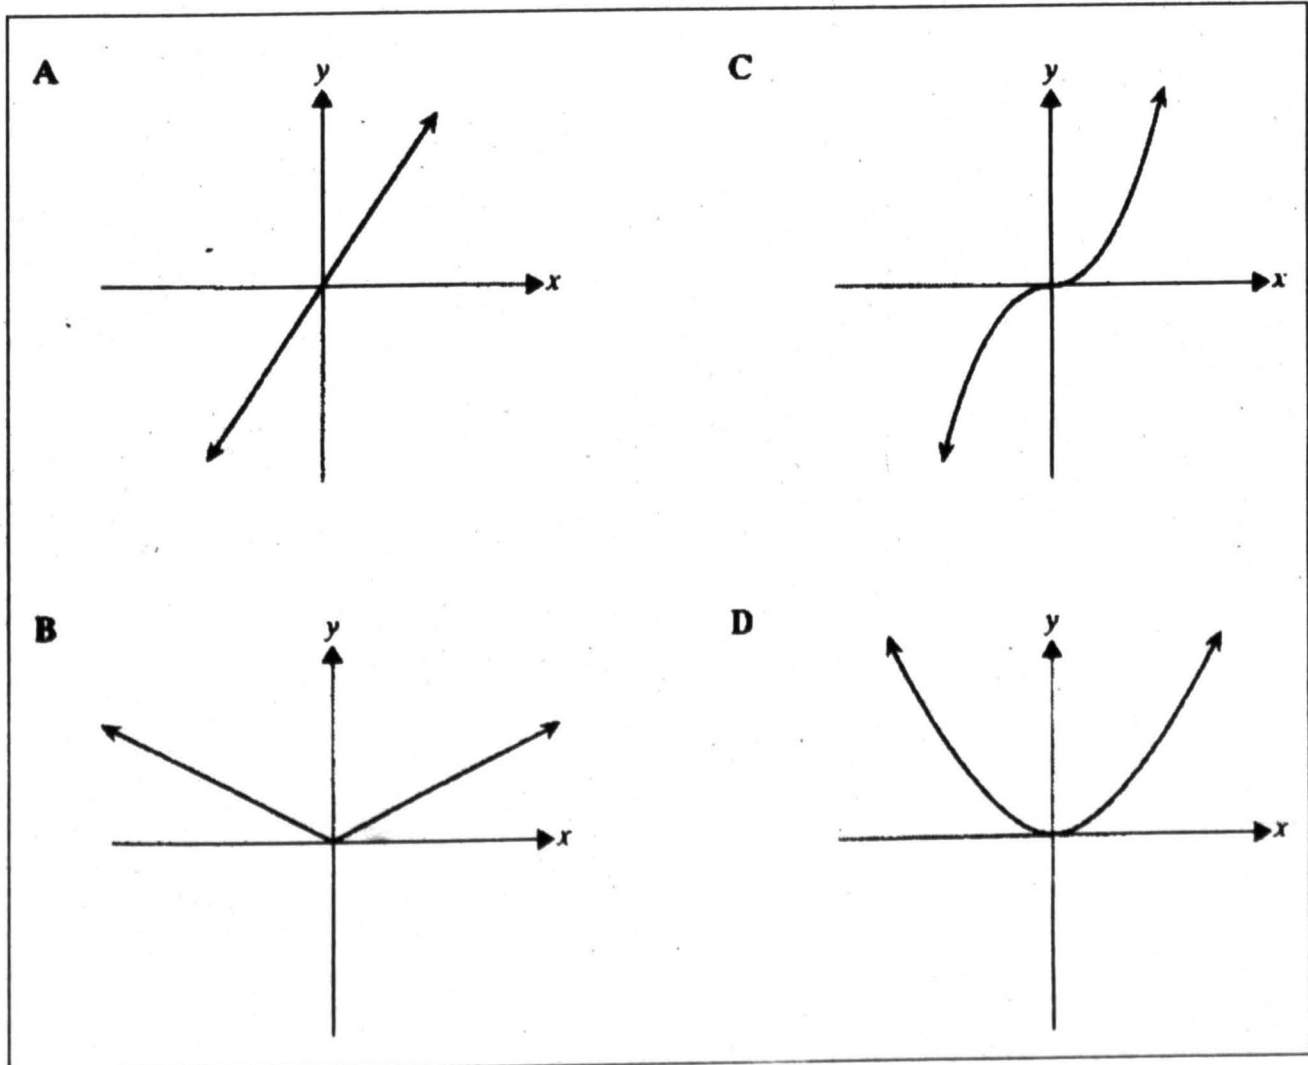

They were given extra help, Coco said, and also felt strongly motivated to pass the test the next time.

"They know they need it to graduate, and that is very important," Coco said.

In March 2002, the kids at Carmel High who flunked the first time were given a second chance. Almost 60 percent of them passed. The few kids who still haven't passed will have several more chances to qualify for graduation.

But while Carmel students seem to have mastery of basic math skills,

See TEST page 16A

Some of the problems on the high school exit exam are challenging. High school students are shown these graphs and asked: Which one could be the solution to  $y = x^3$ ? (The answer is C.) But many of the problems on the test are easy, and a score of 55% is enough to pass.

Monterra dirt pile raises concerns at county

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A HUGE pile of dirt and crushed rock excavated for a new garage at Community Hospital was deposited at Monterra Ranch without a county permit, and officials are trying to figure out what to do about it.

"Should they have to take it back out? Then you have 5,000 trucks going out — that's clearly not the right environmental thing to do," said County Administrative Officer Sally Reed.

But concerns about erosion and flooding have caused a delay in issuing an after-the-fact permit for the 80,000-cubic-yard stockpile, which was gradually deposited near Highway 68 before county planning officials heard about it.

"The applicants came to me and said, 'We took this dirt and realized we never got a permit for it, and it was an oversight and now we need to fix it,'" said county chief assistant planning director Alana Knaster.

The owner of Monterra Ranch, Roger Mills, and his developer, Alan Williams, have been getting ready to build new roads for the 171-home subdivision on 1,700 acres near Monterey airport. While they were studying possible sites to dig for fill at the ranch itself, an offer of dirt from CHOMP's underground garage project came along. Otherwise, the excavated material from the hospital would have been trucked to the Marina landfill.

"In the construction industry, people are always helping each other out," Williams said. "Roger knew I was trying to find dirt and he said, 'We can get dirt from the hospital,' and I said, 'Sure.' I didn't pay that much attention until the stuff kept coming."

Williams, who is working on several big projects simultaneously, said he was busy finalizing Pebble Beach's development plans with the county and only later realized the dirt for Monterra Ranch was coming from within the City of Monterey and therefore required a separate county permit on his end.

What's typically a simple, administrative matter is more complicated now that the dirt's already been deposited, according to Knaster. "There's a penalty for coming in and getting a permit after the fact — it's double the permit fee. But this situation also triggers environmental review because it's not a small amount of dirt," she said.

Erosion and impacts on the habitat are the greatest concerns, she said. "We're going to make sure the habitat is protected and that there's no flooding," Reed added.

Erosion will not be a problem since the dirt is crushed stone and was dumped on the building site for a road that has already been through environmental review and approval, according to Williams. The elevation of the road is high so it won't interrupt drainage from the canyons on the property.

"The main thing is to make sure no damage has been done," Reed said.

Russians to check out tourist trade, Carmel style

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE RUSSIANS are coming, and they need places to stay.

Making use of a Rotary-supported program organized by the Center for Citizen Initiatives, 11 Russian men and women who work in the tourism industry will spend three weeks on the Monterey Peninsula Oct. 31 to Nov. 23 learning the American way their businesses are run, according to innkeeper Gary Luce, a Carmel-by-the-Sea Rotarian.

Staying with local families — rather than in hotel rooms — will significantly contribute to that experience, and as coordinator of the visit, Luce is searching for people willing to open their homes for a week or more.

"Home hosting is always a problem," for overseas visitors in such programs, Luce said. "We're not looking for a three-week commitment, only one week, to offer the experience of being in someone's home."

Hosts need not be Rotarians themselves, he added, and would require a private bedroom, two meals a day and rides to and from the Dolphin Inn in downtown Carmel.

From there, the Russians will set out on their visits to travel agencies, tour providers and other destinations to see how American tourist-oriented businesses operate.

"Instead of just a tour at the Monterey Bay Aquarium, it's a full-day session, and they'll be talking about marketing, and 'How do you do this?' and 'How do you do that?'" Luce said, illustrating the work that goes into coordinating each day's activities.

Luce said he was surprised by the variety and types of businesses the Russians run.

One 50-year-old woman from Volgograd organizes tours featuring the life, traditions and folklore of the Cossacks. A 29-year-old St. Petersburg man oversees a 25-person operation that offers historical and educational tours of the city. Several organize hunting, fishing and other outdoor excursions, while a few focus on international travel and group trips.

"Each of these participants has a special interest, so we want to make sure the business visits coincide with what their needs are," he said.

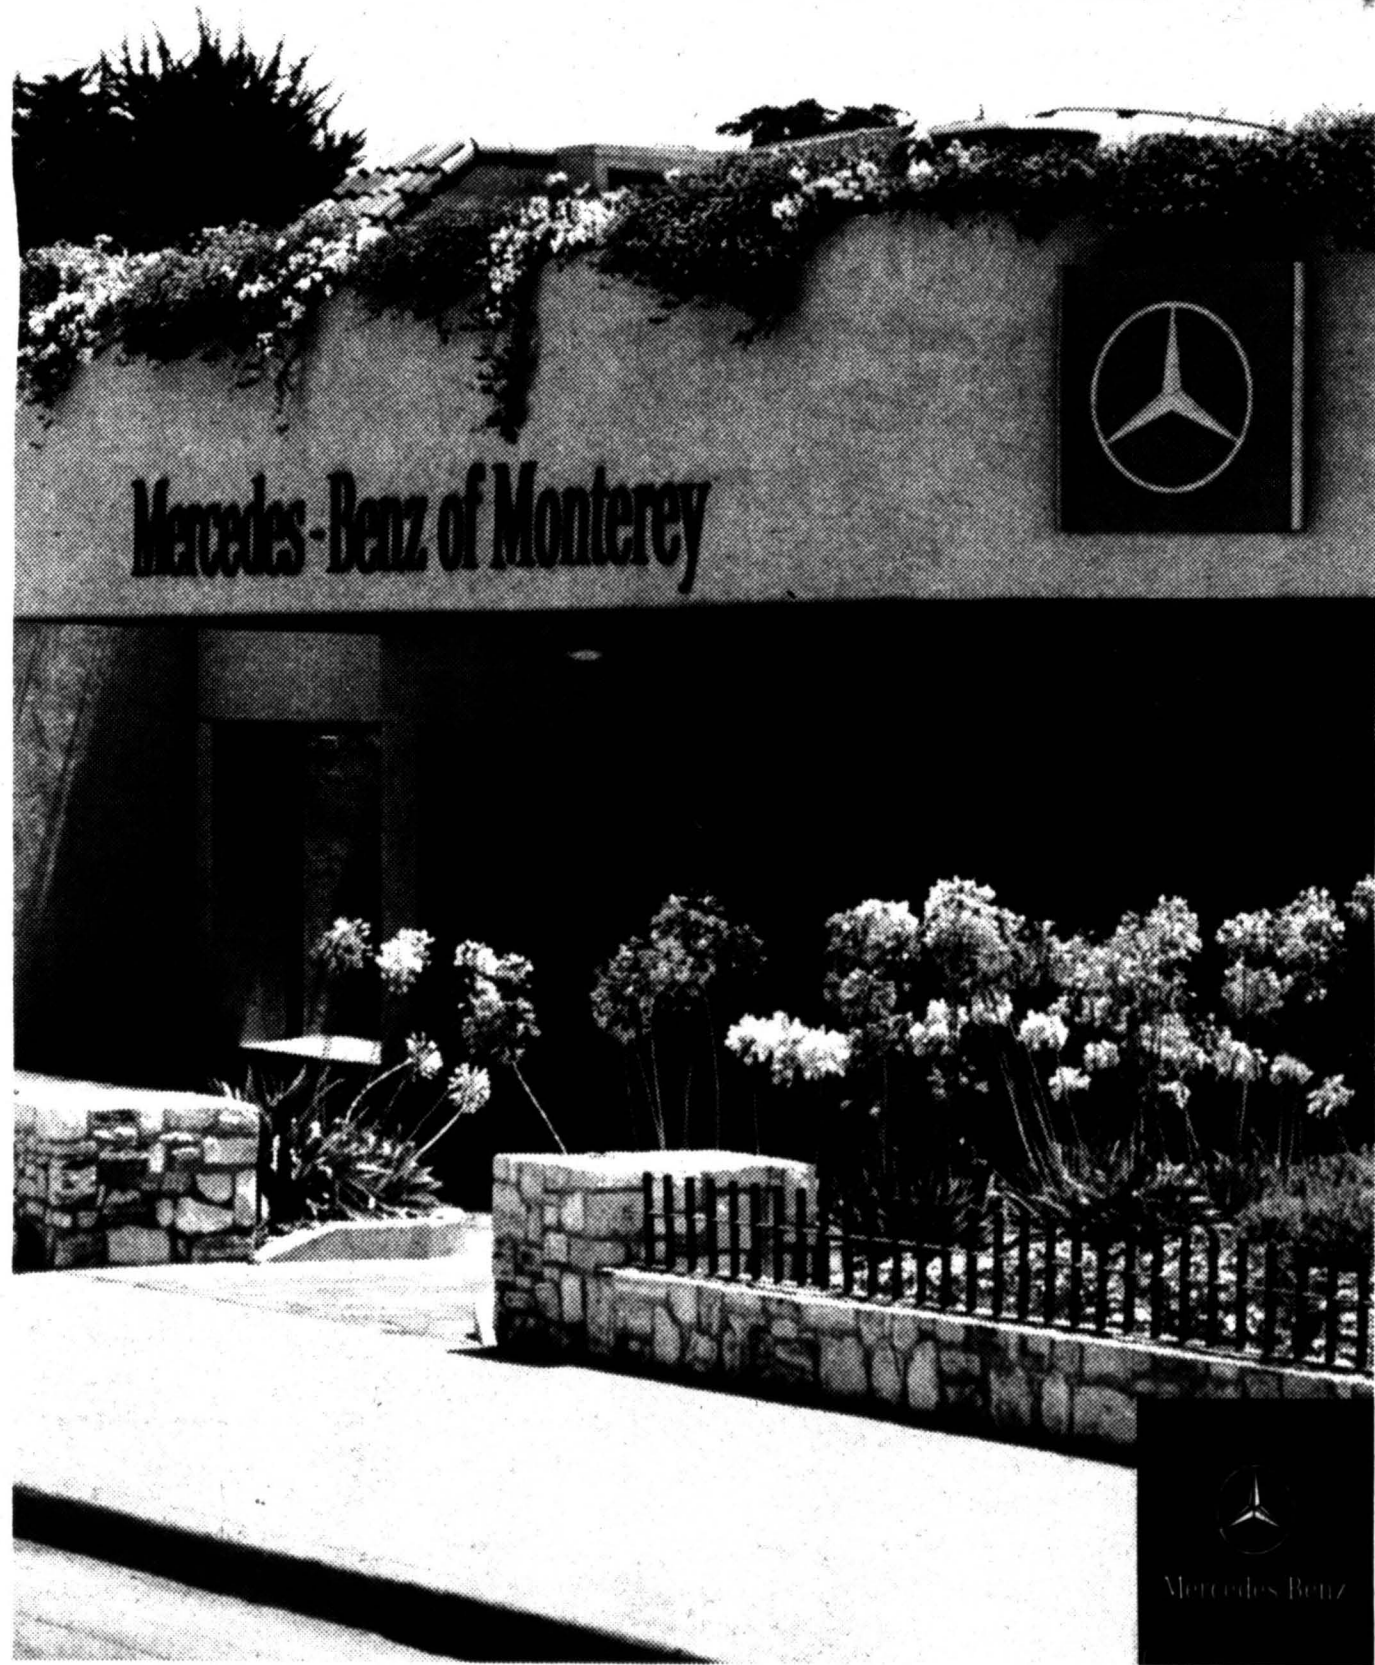

While he has assisted with similar programs in the past, this is the first Luce has coordinated. He stepped up after CCI attended a Rotary district conference in April and asked if any clubs would help.

"It's usually done by one club, but we are so small that we thought the only way was to get all seven clubs involved," he said.

Luce reiterated his hope that others will be inspired to share their hospitality by opening their homes to the visitors from afar.

He encouraged anyone interested in hosting a Russian guest to call him at 624-0101.

CBA hopes new marketing campaign will boost membership

By TAMARA GRIPPI

MORE THAN half of Carmel's businesses don't belong to the Carmel Business Association.

But with a brand-new marketing strategy in place to lure more tourists to town, the CBA is also stepping up its recruitment of new members to help pay for the marketing push.

The CBA invited the public to a meeting last week at La Playa Hotel at which the San Francisco PR firm, Graham and Associates, unveiled its new tourism pitch — "Carmel-by-the-Sea, the magical mile."

Unlike the CBA's former marketing effort, handled for the last eight years by Beverly Hills PR firm Murphy O'Brien, the new campaign is geared specifically to bring more visitors to the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

In the next few months, the CBA plans to spread the word about its new marketing campaign and try to boost its membership. Currently, only about 310 of Carmel-by-the-Sea's 642 businesses belong to the CBA. Approximately 150 more CBA members are located outside the city limits.

City councilman Dick Ely and councilwoman Paula Hazdovac — both business owners themselves and members of the CBA — have complained that less than half of the city's businesses contribute to the overall marketing effort.

The city council has contributed $100,000 to fund the CBA's marketing program since 1995.

Also, the CBA can usually spend $30,000 a year of its budget — supported by members' dues — on additional marketing efforts. CBA Executive Director Brenda Roncarati would like to see that budget grow.

"It's a great start, but there's so much more we can do as a community," Roncarati said.

While most businesses spend some kind of money on advertising every year, they could make those dollars go a lot further if they pooled them with the rest of the business community, Roncarati argued.

The dues — which range from $160 a year for nonprofits to $600 a year for the larger hotels — buy members a spot in the annual "Guide to Carmel," a subscription to the monthly newsletter and referrals from the CBA staff.

Roncarati said the CBA has new software that can track how often the CBA office refers a Carmel business to an inquiring tourist. "Anyone can call me anytime and ask, 'What is my value?'" Roncarati said.

However, some business owners said they are doing just fine without the CBA.

Milton Williams, III, whose family has owned The Shop in the Garden on Lincoln Street since 1958, said he doesn't need more customers. His business — specializing in whimsical copper insects and other hand-crafted creatures for gardens — isn't set up to handle high sales volume.

"Most advertising puts pressure on us in terms of production," Williams said. "It puts extra pressure on our artisans. We're artists, not business people."

Madeleine Tourel, owner of Chez Felix, explained that her restaurant is not a member of the CBA because, "We belong to so many associations, we have to make a choice."

Tourel said Chez Felix maintains a solid base of customers without advertising.

Answering some of the critics

The CBA's former marketing campaign — "Carmel-by-the-Sea, there's more to love" — faced increasing criticism from city politicians who wondered if the message was getting stale.

This year, the CBA board of directors opted to put out a request for marketing proposals on the open market and interviewed nine firms before selecting Graham and Associates.

Its president, Lydia Graham, promised her company's strategy will be much different than Murphy O'Brien's approach, which was heavily focused on enticing travel writers to highlight the Carmel area.

Graham and Associates' program will highlight the one-square-mile village and will utilize print advertising, radio spots, web marketing and travel writers.

Police & Sheriff's Log

More Carmel Beach porta-potty trauma

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department last week.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 22

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Alarm activation at Lincoln and Ocean. Contact made with a subject who indicated he had accidentally bumped against the keypad for the alarm system. This may have caused the alarm to activate.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Officer flagged down by a citizen at Del Mar, who reported a man had fainted on the beach just south of the restrooms. Information also provided by dispatch after a second citizen called in the incident. Contacted a male subject who confirmed he had just fainted, but reported he felt fine and did not want any additional assistance. He advised he had been running up the hill and felt dizzy before fainting. CFD had already been dispatched, and they responded to the scene where the subject declined treatment and signed a waiver.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Responded to Guadalupe and Fourth on report of a subject who followed the resident's wife home. Met with both, who appeared to have been drinking. Resident reported a neighbor yelled at his wife to slow down and then followed her home and stared at her. Ongoing dispute. Wife said she was traveling at approximately 25 mph when the incident occurred. Advised that while the speed limit is 25 mph, sometimes it is too fast for the conditions, which is the basic speed law. Advised she take another route home if she wants to avoid conflict. Residents became upset and stated they didn't have to change their lives. Contacted the neighbor, who said he had yelled at her to slow down. Advised him that in order to keep the peace, he should call the police if hers or any other vehicles are seen driving recklessly down the street.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report that a subject took a bag which contained monies from the collection from afternoon mass. The subject was seen walking toward the south chapel area. Preliminary search for the vehicle and subject met with negative results. Pending follow-up regarding whether the church will want a formal criminal investigation.

Carmel area: Carmel River Inn reported a guest refused to pay the animal fee.

Carmel area: Male reported he lost his wallet possibly at the Chevron station at Rio Road and Highway 1.

Guilty plea in Pebble Beach attack

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE IRANIAN-BORN Dutch man arrested trying to leave the country in August after holding a knife to his ex-girlfriend's throat pleaded guilty to one felony count of assault with a deadly weapon before Monterey County Superior Court Judge John Phillips Sept. 19, according to Elaine McCleaf, a deputy district attorney in the domestic violence division.

Hassan Arzaghi, 34, sought out his victim — a Russian woman living and working on the Monterey Peninsula — at her Carmel job Aug. 22 and convinced her to take him to her home, then threatened her, attempted to kill her and kidnapped her, according to the Monterey County Sheriff's Department. At one point, he held a knife to her throat and she pushed it away, cutting her hand, Sgt. Scott Ragan reported in August. He then forced her into a car and drove for a while, eventually dropping her off back at work.

Arzaghi was arrested the following day at San Francisco International Airport trying to leave the country and was taken to Monterey County Jail.

Prior to entering his plea last week, Arzaghi stood accused of attempted murder, spousal abuse (although the suspect and his victim were not married, their dating relationship met the criteria for this charge), making terrorist threats and false imprisonment.

Sentencing is set for Oct. 7.

"His defense attorney is proposing he just get on a plane and go," McCleaf said. "I'd like to make a stronger impression on him."

As part of the plea agreement, Arzaghi may be sentenced to felony probation with a maximum 365 days in county jail, but no time in state prison. McCleaf suspects he will go back to the Netherlands as soon as he can.

"He has no residence here," she said. "Once he gets out of jail, he will have to report to the Monterey County Probation Department, and probably with their permission, he'll leave."

CARMEL P.D. FEELS TRANSPORTATION PINCH

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AFTER YEARS of relying on deputies from the Monterey County Sheriff's Department to pick up prisoners bound for county jail, the Carmel Police Department is now searching for a new way to transport them to Salinas — without putting a big dent in the police department's budget or sending the city's police officers on frequent trips out of town, according to Carmel Police Chief George Rawson.

Sheriff Gordon Sonné decided this summer that his agency would no longer take prisoners on the 20-plus-mile trip from the Peninsula to the county jail, according to Rawson. The transports had worked when the county courthouse on Aguajito Road handled criminal cases and contained a jail, but now that those cases are only heard in Salinas, the sheriff decided it was costing too much money to pick up prisoners on the Peninsula.

"The sheriff approached us and said they were no longer able to provide this service," Rawson said, because deputies had to spend too much time off their beats, which hurt their response times.

"We understand and respect that. We all have the same challenge ourselves, wanting to make sure we're providing the best service to the community," he said.

Carmel and other jurisdictions tried to reach a compromise, but to no avail, according to Rawson. Now, whenever someone is arrested in Carmel for a crime that requires a stay in Monterey County Jail — such as a felony or an outstanding warrant for which the person cannot make bail — a police officer must drive the suspect to jail.

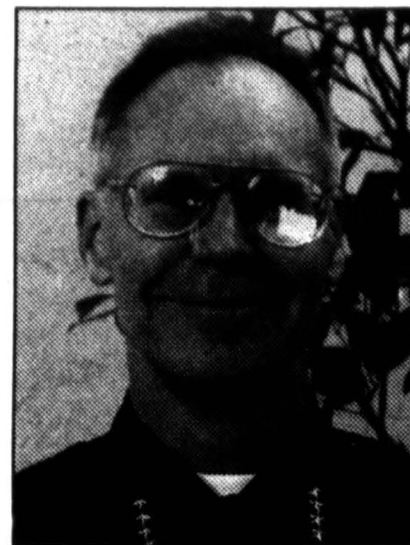

"We have to get these people transported all the way to Salinas," he said. "I have staffing limitations, and we can't hold them here, so we have to call in our reserve officer or off-duty officers, which will cost overtime."

Close call

For a while, the situation appeared to get even worse, when Monterey P.D. considered no longer housing prisoners arrested by Carmel police for crimes requiring only an overnight stay — such as public intoxication or being under the influence of drugs. CPD can keep a prisoner in its holding cell for a maximum of four hours.

But a new contract proposed this week would ensure the use of Monterey's jail will continue.

"Just like the sheriff isn't obligated to transport arrestees, we're not obligated to take anyone's prisoners," said Monterey Police Chief Carlo Cudio. Currently, police in

Chief George Rawson

Carmel, Pacific Grove, Del Rey Oaks, Sand City and at the airport use MPD's jail.

"Frankly we're in a bind here in terms of personnel and workload," he continued. MPD considered no longer taking other jurisdictions' prisoners to eliminate the additional time and paperwork that service requires, but quickly decided against it.

"We realized we need to be good neighbors even though it hurts us and it does take a lot of work," he said.

Last year, Carmel P.D. had a total of 86 arrests, according to Rawson. Twenty-nine spent the night at Monterey City Jail — some of whom deputies took to county jail, but most of whom were cited and released the following day. Carmel police officers drove 30 prisoners to county jail; the remaining 27 were misdemeanor violators cited and released out of the station in Carmel.

Had the contract allowing Carmel to keep overnight prisoners in Monterey for a $137 fee not materialized, police officers here would have had to drive even the drunks all the way to Monterey County Jail.

"Letting them go drunk is not an option — we just can't do that," said Carmel Lt. Pete Poitras. "Once we come in contact with someone not capable of caring for themselves, they become our responsibility. It's our problem to deal with them, and assuming all other potential avenues are shut off [such as delivering the intoxicated person to a responsible caregiver], the only alternative would be to transport them to Salinas."

Rawson said he is thankful for Monterey's willingness to help.

"They are solution oriented," he said. "I'm grateful for that because there are not a lot of options left here on the Peninsula."

Bach stage crew threatens to unionize, strike

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

THE STAGE and technical crew of The Carmel Bach Festival want better benefits and more pay. And the behind-the-scenes workers say they will bring their grievances to center stage with a strike, if necessary.

Pickers greeted patrons of the recent harpsichord performance at the Pebble Beach Church in the Forest Sept. 24. While polite, and even friendly, the stage crew's leaflets declared, "Carmel Bach Festival is utilizing unfair labor practices." Calling itself the "dream team," the crew claimed it was locked out of work for the Bach Festival's winter spin-off, the Bravissima Series.

Bach Fest Executive Vice President Willem Wijnbergen said he is confident the issues with the stage crew will be settled through negotiations with the National Labor Relations Board.

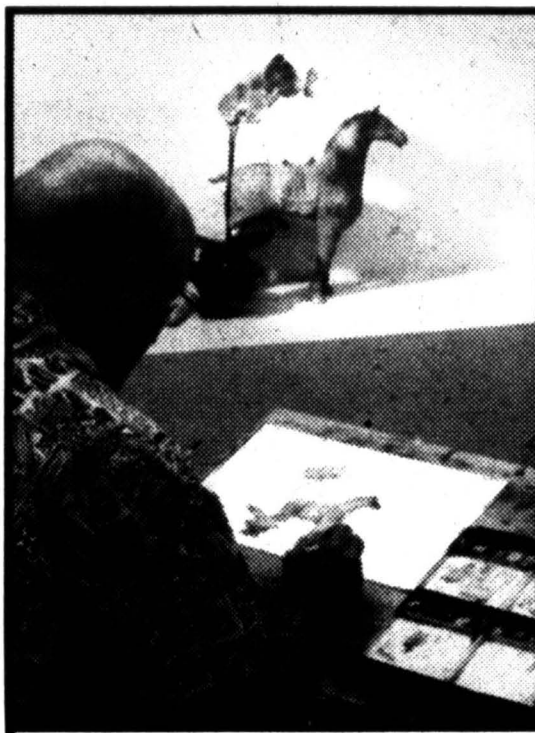

Ross Brown, technical director of the Bach Festival, said the crew brought up their grievances about a year ago. At the time, festival management suggested the matter be put off until the festival is back in Sunset Theater, when the on-going renovation is finished.

"We understand financial difficulties," Brown said. "None of us is made of money, and we wanted to sit down and talk about it, which we did."

Michael Becker, stage manager for the Bach Festival since 1982 and before that, from 1970 to '73, told The Pine Cone, "The Bach Festival is suffering from monetary constraints, as all the arts are. Having [the crew] unionize would put an extra burden on the festival to a certain degree, but it would give the crew some security. A red flag goes up with the board at the word 'union.'"

Becker, who works during The Carmel Bach Festival, and not for Bravissima performances, said, "This issue has been talked about all summer. It's been brewing since the last festival. I think it [unionization] will happen eventually."

The next Bravissima performance is scheduled for Dec. 6 when violinist Libby Wallfisch will perform at All Saints Church, Carmel. Brown said, "We don't want to picket. We have to fight for our livelihoods. I haven't called [for a strike] for that one yet. None of us wants to see anything happen to the festival. We hope it continues for many years."

CITYHOOD 101: VALLEY RESIDENTS WILL LEARN THE BASICS

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AS SOME Carmel Valley residents ready a petition to get the Carmel Valley incorporation process rolling, the executive director of the Local Agency Formation Commission — which has to OK the new city before voters get their say — will talk about LAFCO's role at a town hall meeting Oct. 9.

"My primary role is to let everybody know what LAFCO does and how it fits into this process and what the law requires," Catherine West said. She won't be taking a position on whether incorporation is financially feasible or what its environmental impacts will be.

Carmel Valley Forum, which was formed in June to provide "unbiased information" to valley residents so they can make a sound decision for or against cityhood, will host the meeting.

The group's chairman, Mike McMillan, is helping to draw up a petition that will ask LAFCO to consider creating a new city of Carmel Valley. The petition will have to be signed by 25 percent of the valley's registered voters before LAFCO will accept it.

"Carmel Valley Forum is the organization that's going to turn in the petition, but that doesn't mean people are for or against incorporation," said the group's spokesman, Max Tadlock.

While some members are obviously supporters of incorporation, West said many want to "go through the process to see if it's even feasible and then make their minds up at the ballot box."

Although she has already met with McMillan and attorney Fran Farina several times, West said her agency's formal work will begin as soon as the proponents file their "notice of intent to circulate a petition."

LAFCO will then advise all the affected districts and cities whose spheres of influhim last September. Warner also sued the gym, Carmel Fitness Center, for allegedly making the two of them work out so close to each other.

According to the complaint — which seeks more than $25,000 in damages for wage loss, hospital and medical expenses, general damage and loss of earning capacity — Warner was working out on a rowing machine while Burrus was lifting weights nearby on Sept. 20, 2001.

"At that time and place, defendant Ron Burrus so carelessly and negligently managed and used the barbell as to cause it to fall on plaintiff, causing injury to plaintiff," the complaint reads.

The lawsuit accuses Burrus of not being careful when lifting weights, considering how little space separated the two men while they exercised.

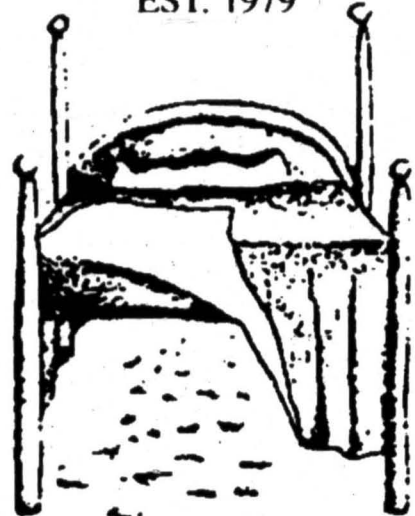

The suit also holds Carmel Fitness Center accountable for causing the accident, since Warner and Burrus were each working out in areas specifically designated by the club. Those areas should not have been located so close to each other, according to Warner.

"A sufficient distance of safety between the weight lifting area and the rowing machine on which plaintiff was operating was inadequate to protect plaintiff and persons similarly situated from the danger of falling weights," according to the suit, which charges the fitness center with general negligence and premises liability.

PACREP

of directors.

The theater, which also must cut next year's budget by 30 percent, will also eliminate two full-time positions it recently established — the company's managing director and sales manager.

Next year, Mooror will also have to take over the duties of the managing director. And PacRep will convert a few other full-time positions to part time.

"We've been through periods of wild swings in the budget, though it hasn't been this bad in a long time," Mooror said. "This is the first time we had to issue a major layoff to the entire company."

Mooror said both individuals and foundations have sharply scaled back their contributions. The theater received $150,000 over the last two years from the Packard Foundation, but won't likely see that money in 2003, he said.

Like many philanthropic organizations, the Packard Foundation has taken a major hit in the stock market: Its total assets dropped from $9.7 billion in 2000 to $4 billion in 2002.

In response, Packard's giving to the arts was slashed by two-thirds this year and will be further cut next year.

PacRep has also lost support from local donors. When the Monterey College of Law withdrew its sponsorship of a conference, Shakespeare and the Law, scheduled to coincide with an extended week of performances of "Henry IV" and "Henry V," PacRep dropped the entire venture.

Mooror explained that the company was in no position to fund the added performances and conference alone. The company's final performance will now be Oct. 13.

Next year, PacRep will also cut back on the number of equity players it can hire. "We'll be producing plays with smaller casts," said Lee Cox, president of PacRep's board of directors. "We'll still offer great plays from around the world, just not plays that have a 50-person cast."

It has been disappointing to see smaller audiences for "The Elephant Man" and Shakespeare's "Henry IV" and "Henry V" performances, Mooror said. The season ticket sales are down by 10 percent this year and the tourist audience — which typically accounts for half of PacRep's patrons — also shrank considerably.

In the midst of such hardships, Mooror is grateful PacRep owns its own theater — the Golden Bough. "Thank God we have the Golden Bough and paid it off last year," he said, acknowledging things would be worse "if we had to struggle out a mortgage payment in addition to everything else."

During these lean times, PacRep will have to rely much more on its board of directors for help with marketing, fundraising and group sales.

Cox said the board plans to reach out to its donor base more often. Its fundraising appeals will be tripled.

"Last year, our fundraising letter was sent out Sept. 10, so it was in the mail already when Sept. 11 happened," Cox said. "We've seen a decline in the response to our direct-mail campaign. It's hard to say what's 9/11 and what's the economic downturn, but we are concerned."

The theater company hopes to expand its volunteer program, the Friends of PRT, currently handling ushering, concessions, mailings and special events.

PacRep will now ask volunteers to help out back stage and with some production duties.

"We're beginning to attract some members of the community who can give us a day a week," Mooror said.

Cox hopes the community will rally behind PacRep. "Carmel is so fortunate to have a theater one block from downtown," he said. "Where else can you walk to see first rate theater?"

Mooror is hoping for a major gift to come through. "Now would be a good time for an angel," he said.

Pac Rep fundraisers at Brinton's, Forest Theater

BRINTON'S STORE on Carmel Rancho Boulevard will hold a fundraiser to benefit PacRep Oct. 4 from 7 to 10 p.m., featuring special savings and two tents full of unique holiday decorations. There will also be drawings for $50, $200 and $500 gift certificates and season tickets for PacRep 2003.

Entry to the event — featuring hors d'oeuvres by master chef Kurt Grasing and a selection of wines — is a $10 donation to PacRep. Ten percent of all sales in the store that night will also go to PacRep.

On Oct. 13, PacRep's closing date for the year, the company will present its final Shakespeare Marathon at the Golden Bough with "Henry IV, Part I," at 10:30 a.m.; "Henry IV, Part II" at 3 p.m. and "Henry V" playing at 7:30 p.m. A special three-show discount is available.

That same day, PacRep is throwing an end-of-season "wrap" party at the Outdoor Forest Theater, beginning at 6:30 p.m., including live entertainment, prize drawings, special guests and a 7 p.m. screening of "The Wizard of Oz." The wrap party is a "pay what you can donate" event.

Fans of flight flock to California International Airshow

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A STEALTH fighter jet kept under wraps by the U.S. military for years will appear — though not on radar screens — at the 22nd California International Airshow at Salinas Airport Oct. 4, 5 and 6. The flock of F/A-18 Hornets better known as the Blue Angels will also streak through the skies, as will aerobatic stars, wingwalkers, parachutists, helicopters and more.

The annual event — a fundraiser which has garnered $5.5 million for more than 200 Monterey County charities over the past two decades — kicks off with a nighttime show Oct. 4, then continues through the weekend.

The Blue Angels, the Navy's demonstration team which last performed at the airshow in 1999, are the main attraction. Started by Navy Admiral Chester Nimitz in 1946 at the end of World War II to keep the public interested in naval aviation, the angels first flew Grumman F6F Hellcats but began piloting jets by the end of the decade. Almost 60 years later, the team uses McDonnell Douglas F/A-18 Hornets, which they have flown since 1986.

Airshow attendees will also glimpse the F-117 A Stealth Fighter — known as the Ninja Nighthawk — credited for knocking out Iraqi military communications facilities in Baghdad during the Gulf War. First flown in 1989, the F-117 A remained a closely guarded secret until its official unveiling in 1990.

Other military exhibitions and flybys include the U.S. Air Force F-16 Fighting Falcon and the Canadian Forces CF-18 Hornet.

Fans of aerobatics won't be disappointed, either, considering the lineup includes Rocky Hill in his AOL Extra 300, which the veteran pilot can maneuver at more than one roll per second. Eddie Andreini makes his huge 450-horsepower Stearman move in ways seeming to defy the laws of gravity and physics, and Sean D. Tucker, stunt pilot of the Oracle Challenger, performs daredevil moves that subject him to G-forces greater than many fighter pilots experience. Tucker, who was afraid to fly after he lost a friend in a skydiving accident, overcame his phobia not only by getting his pilot's license in 1969, but by attending aerobatics school in 1973. Since then, he has flown more than 700 performances at hundreds of airshows for more than 60 million fans.

Helicopters move in ways a plane can't — like sideways and backward — and the three-member Showcopters team likes to show off those skills by challenging other airshow performers to drag races and in-air maneuvers.

Manfred Radius' outside loops, snap rolls, tail slides, inverted spins and vertical 8's are all performed in a sailplane, and skydivers and wingwalkers will also showcase their talents during the event.

But not all the action is in the sky. The ground explodes with Rich Gibson's Incredible Wall of Fire — during which flames and billowing smoke blast 60 feet into the air — and Friday night features a fireworks spectacular.

Kent Shockley's Shockwave Jet Truck sports jet engines that give it 36,000 horsepower, and he demonstrates that thrust by racing against planes at speeds exceeding 300 mph. He holds the world record for truck speed: 376 mph.

Among all the action, static displays on the tarmac give showgoers up-close looks at military aircraft, historic and custom-built planes, and other treasures.

Lowdown on tickets

TISH

teers arrived to help guide the ocean native into a kennel for transport to the Marine Mammal Center's triage facility at Moss Landing.

Tish didn't put up much of a fight. After an initial retreat when he first realized the three volunteers were moving in on him, Tish meekly scooted into the waiting cage. He looked familiar to Ed Whitaker.

"I think he's the one who didn't even want out of the cage last time we let him loose," said the volunteer.

Kathy Zagzebski, who manages the mammal center's stranding unit, explained that sea lions can often imprint on people very quickly. "The less time they spend at the center, the better," she said.

Holm worried that maybe Tish had become too dependent on his human helpers.

Tish, who was originally picked up Aug. 28, spent just under three weeks at the Marine Mammal Center's main hospital in Sausalito where he was treated for lung worms, an eye injury and the San Miguel Sea Lion Virus that causes skin sloughing on flippers.

Cognizant of the urgency to get Tish back to his saltwater home, the veterinarians released him Sept. 17 even though he was slightly underweight. Two weeks later he was reported stranded at Marina State Beach.

(An orange, numbered tag on his flipper identified him.)

They tried once more to send Tish back to the sea on Sept. 28 and found out a few days later that he's still not ready.

Zagzebski explained that Tish fulfilled the other requirements for being set free: His blood test showed he was healthy and he proved he could compete with other sea lions for food.

Perhaps Tish will need a little more fattening up before venturing out again.

Sea lions depend on their blubber to stay warm and the leaner animals can have trouble withstanding the cold water.

Each year, the Marine Mammal Center treats 400 to 600 stranded sea mammals — from the northern border of Mendocino through the southern border of San Luis Obispo County.

"Sometimes the releases are very successful," Zagzebski said. "Apparently he did not quite get it. We might need to release him in a little bit more remote location next time."

Thank You for doing your part.

Once more, Monterey Peninsula residents have made sacrifices in their water use. September 30 marked the end of the "water year", the twelve-month period the State uses to evaluate how much water we use.

You have again met the State Order that limits Monterey Peninsula water use. You are rightfully proud of your success. By meeting the State's limit on water use, you helped avoid fines that could reach $3 million per year. Costs we all want to avoid.

The challenge begins again on October 1. We all need to remain vigilant in how we use water. As the rainy season begins, please turn off automatic sprinklers. Hotels and restaurants can help by only serving water upon request.

The passing of another year of sacrifice, aggravation and enormous expense should be a reminder to us all that Monterey Peninsula residents deserve a permanent, reliable water source.

From all of us at Cal-Am, thanks for your good work.

While these water saving tips are a good idea for everyone, the water use restrictions do not apply to residents of Ambler Park, Bishop, Hidden Hills and Ryan Ranch.

A TASTING room open house, a quarter barrel wine auction and a grand wine tasting and live auction are all on tap for the three-day Carmel Valley Wine Festival this weekend, Friday through Sunday, Oct. 4 - 6.

It's a celebration of the Carmel Valley wine appellation and production of the estate-crafted wine from vineyards within that designation. A schedule of events includes:

• Friday, Oct. 4, 6 to 8 p.m. — Tasting room open house: Visit Bernardus, Durney/Heller, Joulilian and Talbott at each tasting room. • Saturday, Oct. 5, 6 to 9 p.m. — Quarter barrel wine auction: Taste samples of best wines poured by winemakers at host Jan De Luz Antiques with food provided by Carmel Valley restaurants. Judge for yourself and then collect one-of-a-kind six-case offering. Can't be there? Absentee wine auction ballots are available, and tickets are $50 per person to the first 100. Call 659-1050 for tickets or visit the web site at CarmelValleyWineFestival.com.

• Sunday, Oct. 6, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. — Grand wine tasting and live auction to benefit the Carmel Valley Community Center: Premium wines from Bernardus, Chateau Christina, Durney/Heller, Galante, Georis, Joulilian, Parsonage Village Vineyard and Talbott wineries will pour samples of their premium wines, with food to be provided by The Corkscrew and Casanova restaurants. # TEST that isn't true in many other school districts, where many students can't meet the basic standards.

The class of 2004 will be the first that will have to pass to graduate.

The hurdle they have to get over comes in two parts: a math exam, consisting of 92 multiple choice questions in algebra, statistics, probability and geometry, taken from the sixth, seventh and eighth grade curriculum, and an English test with 94 multiple choice questions and two essays.

The test is "the most rigorous high school exam in the nation," according to State Board of Education President Reed Hastings.

But from the failure rate, it appears many students can't hack the rigor. Statewide, 36 percent of students didn't pass the math test and another 48 percent failed the English portion. In some schools, only 20 percent of juniors passed the test this year.

Is the test too hard?

A sample math test shows some questions are quite difficult.

A question from eighth grade algebra asks, "What is the y-intercept of the line  $2x - 3y = 12$ ?" Another question asks students to simply this mathematical expression:

$$(5x^2z^2)(8xz^3)$$

Another question shows four graphs (see box on page 1A), and asks which one could be  $y = x^3$ .

These problems could flummox many high school seniors — and quite a few adults.

But a student doesn't have to answer those questions to pass. That's because only 55 percent of the questions have to be answered correctly to graduate. And at least half the questions on a sample test distributed by the department of education were quite easy.

One question, from seventh grade level math, was this:

The price of a calculator has decreased from $12 to $9. What is the percentage decrease?

Students could pick from four answers: 3 percent, 25 percent, 33 percent or 75 percent.

Another question: Heather flipped a coin five times and each time it came out heads. If Heather flips the coin one more time, what

- A all calls.
- B 3 minute calls only.
- C calls less than 3 minutes.
- D calls longer than 3 minutes.

Should students who have had math class every day for ten years be required to answer questions like these correctly to graduate from high school? The problems above — from sixth and seventh grade curricula — were on a sample exit test administered to juniors last spring. Statewide, about half of them flunked.

is the probability that it will come up tails?

Quite a few other questions were no harder (see boxes above).

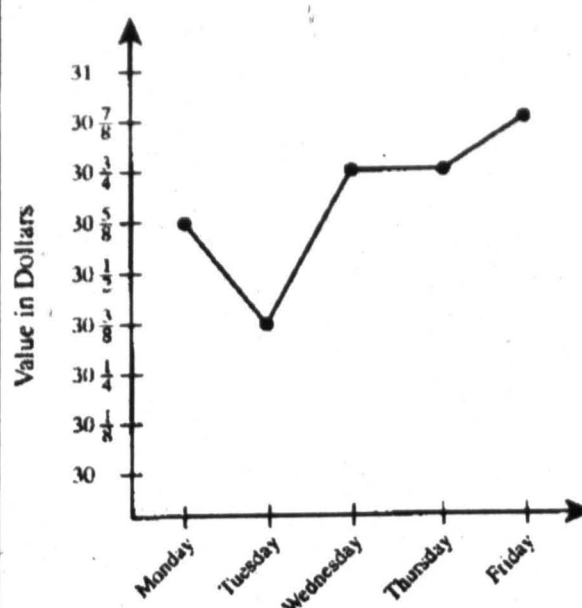

High schools may be unhappy about all the work in front of them to ensure their students get diplomas, but higher education officials said the emphasis on basic skills is overdue.

Nancy Souza of Monterey Peninsula College's "College Readiness Program" said so many students are enrolled in remedial courses at the campus that "it's almost like their 13th year."

"There are more students than room in the basic skills classes," said Souza.

The college readiness program is a specially funded program for students who meet certain income requirements and are the first in their family to go to college. But MPC has many more students who show up needing basic skills training.

According to Wanda Lockwood, director of the college's English Center, 1,500 of 7,000 full-time students are enrolled in the English basics courses.

"The majority place at two levels below freshman composition writing," said Lockwood. "It takes two to four semesters to get to college-level writing."

Souza said she thinks the new emphasis on basic skills will lessen the deluge of unqualified students at the college level, but it's going to take some time.

"We need to start earlier than high school," she said. "High school is too late."

Longtime Carmel resident LORNA JANE PLUMP GAHAGAN died Aug. 26. She was 88.

A native of Palo Alto, she attended Holy Names School in Oakland and graduated from Piedmont High School in 1931.

Her father was the city clerk of Redwood City from 1908 to 1916, and then became an early investor in the Clorox Company in 1918. He was vice president and a director of Clorox, headquartered in Oakland, for many years.

An accomplished dress designer and seamstress, she established and ran her own dress shop in Piedmont before going to New York City in 1934 as an apprentice to fashion designer Elizabeth Hawes. Returning to California, she attended Occidental College for one year.

In 1939, she married G. William Gahagan of San Francisco and Goshen, N.Y. in a ceremony at the Carmel Mission. During the first year of their marriage they lived in Berkeley, where she attended the University of California.

After establishing residences with her family in Woodside; Hanover, N.H.; Boulder and Denver, Colo. and Carmel, Mrs. Gahagan moved to Rome, Italy, where her husband was a teacher and then a director of Special Services at the U.S. Embassy.

While in Rome, she was involved in activities for teens and worked at the International Overseas School in its nursery school.

Mrs. Gahagan returned to the states to live in Santa Barbara in the mid-'60s, relocating to the Bay Area and Carmel in the '70s.

In 1989, Mrs. Gahagan and her husband, Will (1912-1998) celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in Carmel, the community they called home.

Several years ago, Mrs. Gahagan was in the first group of honorees designated by the Carmel City Council as "Unsung Heroes." She was also an active member of the Carmel Foundation.

She is survived by two daughters, Kathleen Hunt of Beverly Hills and Lissa Nicolaus of Ross; two sons, Michael of Sonora and Mark of Missoula, Mont.; a sister, Carla McKesson of Monterey and seven grandchildren.

Memorials are suggested to the Carmel Foundation.

A memorial service for JOHN WILLIAM STEAKLEY will begin at 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 6 at the Church in the Forest in Pebble Beach.

Mr. Steakley died Sept. 24 at Hospice House in Monterey.

Born in DeLeon, Texas, he was a mathematics instructor for pilots at the McAllen Air Base and achieved the rank of Second Lieutenant. After the war he served in the Army Reserves, and completed his education at SMU, receiving a B.A. degree.

In 1962, Mr. Steakley moved his family to Dallas where he established the dealership that became Steakley Chevrolet-Geo-Subaru.

In 1985, he married Danielle Tarnowski of Franklin Village, Mich., who shared in his love of the arts, world travel, their dog Charley and the Monterey Peninsula. His other passions were football and golf, which earned him the nickname "Eagle."

Mr. Steakley is survived by his wife, Danielle; brother Robert, Jr.; daughter Anne Steakley Reeder; son John Jr. and four granddaughters.

Memorials are suggested to the Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research, Grand Central Station, P.O. Box 4777, New York, NY 10163; www.michaeljfox.org.

As if we needed reminding: Monterey Jazz Fest best in the universe

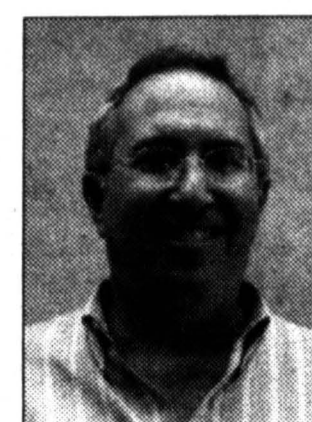

BEGINNING WITH an evening of "new perspectives" as presented by a troika of young turks (Roy Hargrove, Don Byron and Joshua Redman) and ending on a cool Sunday night with a riveting performance by jazz legend Dave Brubeck and Quartet, the 45th edition of the Monterey Jazz Festival was yet another tour de force, a festival for the ages. Beautiful September weather, good food and good vibes in general and an amazing array of music all made for a wonderful weekend.

From over-the-top, sassy get-down blues of Etta James and Big Sarah to the classy ensemble work of Brubeck and Ramsey Lewis (with vocalist Nancy Wilson to boot), and passionate bass playing by Alex Blake and Charlie Haden (Haden's "America" was brilliant and incredibly stirring), the Monterey Jazz Festival once again demonstrated why it has to be ranked as one of the best in the universe. And now that all the folks from Los Angeles and beyond have packed their bags and left for home, the beat goes on at a myriad of Monterey Peninsula venues promoting a wealth of jazz through-

Dave Brubeck, seated before sidemen — (from left) Bobby Militello, alto sax, Michael Moore, bass, and Randy Jones, drums, couldn't have been better at the Monterey Jazz Festival's Sunday night finale.

'Grease' is the word Saturday in the park

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

IF THE '50s really grabbed you, you'll want to bring your honey to Devendorf Park at dusk on Saturday, Oct. 5 for a free screening of "Grease." Starring John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, this classic coming-of-age musical will nudge your memory with favorite tunes and recreate the mores of that era.

Come early, bring blankets, family and friends and dress warmly — even don a block sweater or a poodle skirt for a little pre-movie dancing in the park, Junipero and Ocean Avenue.

This end-of-summer fun is sponsored by the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea Community Activities & Recreation Division, directed by Christie Miller. For information, call 626-1255.

Meals on Wheels turns 30

"THIRTY YEARS and Still Growing" was the theme for the Meals on Wheels 200-plus donor appreciation party at the Sally Griffin Center... Honorary committee member Lloyd Morain said he liked everything about MOW. Honorary chair Morley Brown and Patricia Ramsey shared their favorite MOW stories... Event chair Sirie Thongchua chatted with Bob Nunes, who has been a Gold Spoon sponsor at the Culinary Classique d' Elegance from the beginning... Board member Mary May chatted with Shirley and Ray Freschi, other faithful contributors to the Classique... Chef Bert & Bella Cutino admired the picture display of the Classique, which he chairs, while board member Fran Friscia noted that what she enjoyed the most about MOW was working on the fundraisers... Ed Haber, with wife Terry and granddaughter Melissa Jones, said he supported MOW because the few times in his life when he was sick, "I looked forward to the time when I would eat... it was the highlight of the day!" Melissa indicated she'd like to become a computer coach at the Center... Michael & Elizabeth Albov, Phyllis & John Goulart and Lillian & Warren King were seen, too. "Coming to the Center gets you out of the house to meet other people and volunteer. And I enjoy seeing the people I fixed lunch for," said Warren... Busy volunteer Jean Stallings comes to the Griffin Center five days a week for lunch — "a place in town for a nutritious 'fast food' meal and nice company," while also getting her blood pressure checked. Former board members Jackie Craghead and Delores Gunia asked, "What would people do without the daily contact of the drivers?"... Event sponsor and board member John O'Brien said it best: "The Center is the Gem on Jewell Avenue." (This excellent report was by MOW's Pat Sandstrum.)

Community treasure turns 90

A woman with more community-oriented achievements than can be listed — Nadine Annand — had her 90th birthday celebrated at the Sally Griffin Center by a huge crowd of friends and relatives from all corners of the country. Amazingly, she still chauffeurs her close friend, 102-year-old Gladys Hummer, running errands for her and others. Nadine's secret? "Optimism," she said, adding that she's also become less judgmental with time. "What I thought was important has come and gone," she explained... Bob Mulford, who just put his house up for sale, came with Merrill Leslie, Nadine's niece. "If I could be as active as she is at her age, it would be marvelous!" said Merrill... Toni Jacobsen caught up with Morley Brown, a buddy from their days helping the Alzheimer's Association. Toni plays the harp for fun... Another awesome senior was Aletha Worrall, who'll turn 95 in November. She tap dances twice weekly — having learned it only 10 years ago... Nadine's sister Berta Jones is a passionate weaver. "Nobody goes naked and yet nobody thinks where the fabric comes from," she pointed out... Some others there: Nadine's sister-in-law Helen Annand, her daughters Pat Bispo, Penny Rappa and Lonnie Houston, Jean Stallings, Cindy Whipple.

A Taste of Harvest at Stonepine

A wine and food benefit for the wonderful group Ag Against Hunger — which distributes surplus produce to food banks — was held at Stonepine Resort... Donors there included Taylor Farms' Bruce & Linda Taylor, Hayashi & Wayland's John Gibbons and his wife and Tanya & Erich Reinhardt... Naturally, exec director Bernie O'Keefe was there with her hubby Gene Glaser. Bernie's been dedicated to this cause for years...

■ Local church group holds potluck lunch

The Women's Association of the Monterey Peninsula's Community Church presented a salad potluck luncheon with Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud sharing her CIA career adventures — a program aptly named "Cloaks and Daggers are Unisex" . . . Group prez Bessie Linvill, and Jeanne Brehmer helped pull it together . . . Roxie Hunting took time away from her myriad volunteer duties, which include work for the Point Pinos Lighthouse, to catch up with friends . . . Full-time volunteers Eleanor Platt and Marion Hansen firmly believe "it's important to keep the mind busy" . . . Kathy's found that "big men" love the clowns the most . . .

Leadership Monterey Peninsula introduced its Class of 2003 at a Crossroads reception. With alumnus ('83 — the very first class) Ben Heinrich pointing out to students "communities are like quilts: you stand back to look at them, but you have to get closer to see where it's fraying, where it needs work" . . . This class will highlight the 20th anniversary of the program, which fosters increased understanding of community needs. Two-thirds of students have their employers pay the tuition . . . "When I moved here from the Bay Area," said Debi Hardwick, a health care exec, "the class helped me get situated in this area." . . . "There's no better way to get to know the community," said Jane Sullivan . . . Others there: Darnell Whitt, Shawna Hershfield, Donna Bane, Mel Green, Frank Lilly, Nolan Kennedy and Tom Williams & Robert Hale.

CARMEN
By Georges Bizet
Sung in French

Bizet's masterpiece Carmen is one of the world's most beloved operas. The story of the sultry Spanish cigarette-girl whose allure dooms a love-struck soldier comes complete with lust, lyrical fervor and some very memorable refrains. Carmen is replete with choral and orchestral grandeur, leaving audiences breathless through it's final murderous moments.

"BSLO's Carmen will leave a lasting imprint on the mind, if not the psyche. Be warned: No one walks away untouched."

'Monterey Shorts' features 10 spellbinding stories by FWOMP

WHEN 10 local writers get together to produce a book of short stories, the process is long and grueling. They critique each other's work again and again. And again.

You can imagine the haggling, the justifications, the pleas for leniency before precious, much-loved lines are cut, the elation when a particularly well-wrought sentence is unanimously praised.

What has emerged from these critique sessions is a book of tales, "Monterey Shorts — Stories by Fiction Writers of the Monterey Peninsula." The stories have been perfect-bound into a trade paperback with tongue-in-cheek Dan Koffman cover art depicting all manner of under-shorts on clotheslines stretched across Cannery Row.

Widely diverse in subject matter and style of writing — spellbinding, funny, fantastic, mysterious, nostalgic, suspenseful — the stories are all well written, and are based around "the last hometown" — Pacific Grove, the unifying theme.

This diverse group of writers has equally varied backgrounds: a WW II veteran, a young immigrant from Iran, a male ER nurse, a retired university instructor, a medical emergency technician, an aircraft marketing consultant, a director of religious education, a health and sexuality educator, and a software designer. Six are men, and four are women.

Ten stories are too many to comment on individually. We have randomly chosen a few: "Monte-Ray Gunn" by Byron Merritt is a laugh-out-loud sci fi story of a Monterey Alien Homicide detective who talks like Sam Spade, and whose partner is a sort of liquid gelatin he carries around in a cup.

"Borscht in the Bay" is a delightful story of a retired Army officer who "keeps an eye on things" around his P.G. home, and frequently reports suspicious happenings to the police. When he reports that he's seen three Russians emerging from the waters off Lovers Point in the dead of night, they think he's gone 'round the bend. But he hasn't.

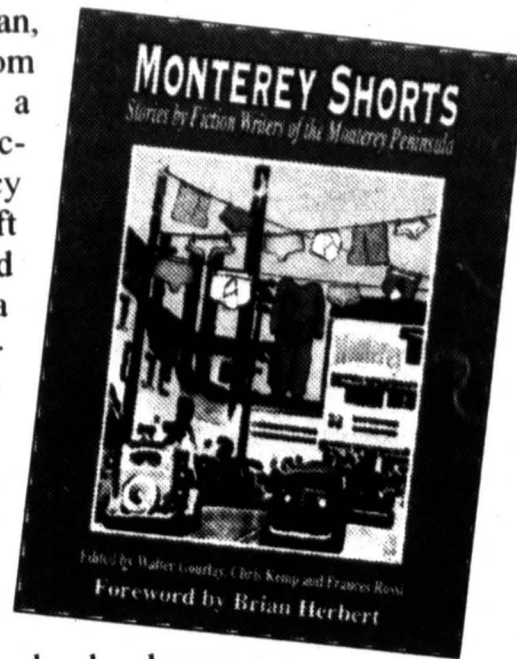

"Mortuary Beach" is a suspenseful SCUBA diving adventure off Monterey Beach that turns deadly. Author Mark C. Angel writes so convincingly, I felt, vicariously, that I had been trapped underwater in dense, roiling kelp beds, unable to make it back to the beach — or even to the surface.

Lele Dahle's "The Lizard Catcher" is a chilling remembrance of a summer long ago when the young protagonist betrays and then loses a friend who is ostracized by her other friends. It will take the reader back to school days when relationships with schoolmates dominated one's life.

These are just a few of the quality stories in the book. I apologize to writers Walter Gourlay, Chris Kemp, Frances J. Rossi, Shaheen Schmidt, Pat Hanson and Mike Tyrrel whose stories all deserve reviews. But we'll leave it to our readers to judge for themselves. The 181-page book, published by Thunderbird Press, retails for $12.95.

Meet the authors at booksignings on three separate occasions: from 3 to 5 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 12 at the Thunderbird Bookshop, The Barnyard, Carmel; from 4 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 13 at the Koffman Gallery, 210 Alvarado St., Monterey — near the DoubleTree Hotel, and from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 26 at Bookworks in P.G.

Monterey Symphony opening night gala set for Friday, Oct. 11

RESERVATIONS DEADLINE is Monday, Oct. 7 to attend the Monterey Symphony's opening night gala, ushering in the 2002/2003 Monterey Symphony season under the leadership of music director Kate Tamarkin. "Celebrate" is the theme of the gala, sponsored by the Friends of the Monterey Symphony. The Friday, Oct. 11 gala will once again be held at The Inn at Spanish Bay.

The evening will begin with a reception at 6 p.m., followed at 7 p.m. by a dinner including fine wines from Monterey County vineyards. This year, a variety of entertainment and music will be featured during the reception and dinner hour. Wally's Swing World will provide old and new tunes for everyone's dancing pleasure in the Spanish Bay Ballroom following the reception and dinner.

A highlight of the evening will be a live auction featuring many offerings such as condos in Hawaii, Lake Tahoe, and Oregon, a desert getaway package with tennis, dinners at fine local restaurants, helicopter rides, AT&T passes, and much, much more.

The gala will also feature a silent auction this year, with jewelry, fine art, gift certificates and other temptations. These valuable auction items have been donated by various Monterey businesses and sponsors, and collected with the help of volunteers from the Friends, the Symphony's auxiliary organization dedicated to fundraising and educational support for the area's young people.

"Opening Night Gala" reservations and information can be obtained by calling the symphony office at 624-8511. Those interested in attending the gala are encouraged to make their reservations as soon as possible.

Apollo Dukakis transcends political incorrectness in 'Merchant'

By BEVERLY HILL VAN JOOLEN

"O HAPPY torment" is the viewing of Pacific Repertory's production of Will Shakespeare's comedy, "The Merchant of Venice." The uncompromising traditionalist will find comfort here, while the Shakespearean neophyte will be fed clues enough in the staging and talent of the players to overcome any difficulty with the language.

Theater Review

When a young Venetian, Bassanio, forces a bond between Shylock, a Jewish money lender and Antonio, a merchant waiting for his ships to come in, he unwittingly sets the stage for revenge. Shylock insists on taking one pound of flesh should the bond be forfeit. Antonio agrees and Bassanio sails for Belmont to win the fair Portia. But in his absence, word arrives that Antonio's vessels have all foundered at sea. Shylock demands his bond and would have cut it from Antonio's chest, but for the sly machinations of clever Portia, disguised as a male lawyer.

Outstanding Shylock

Squirming at the inherent anti-Semitic tone of the play is unavoidable. But in an outstanding performance as Shylock, veteran actor Apollo Dukakis negotiates the barbed text with exacting temperance. He avoids a shallow characterization by playing Shylock as neither blatantly evil nor pathetically ill used. Dukakis presents the money lender as wholly human, which allows the audience to commiserate his position without being compelled to apologize for his predicament.

Ron Cohen is commendable as the honorable Antonio. Portia is played by Julie Hughett with a gentle fire and Kevin Black is charming as Bassanio. As his friends, John Farmanesh-Bocca (Gratiano) is amusing, and Anthony Piana (Lorenzo) is dashing. Vying for Portia's hand are the Princes of Morocco (Armond Edward Dorsey) and Arragon (J.T. Holmstrom). With both roles, director Louis Scheeder allowed the actors to paint their characters with excess. The result is a wonderfully playful embellishment.

James Kiberd is beguiling as the base but devoted servant, Launcelot Gobbo. Michael Jacobs plays his father with deranged vitality. Katie O'Brien is feisty as Shylock's daughter and Lucy Serrano brightens the stage as Nerissa, Portia's maid.

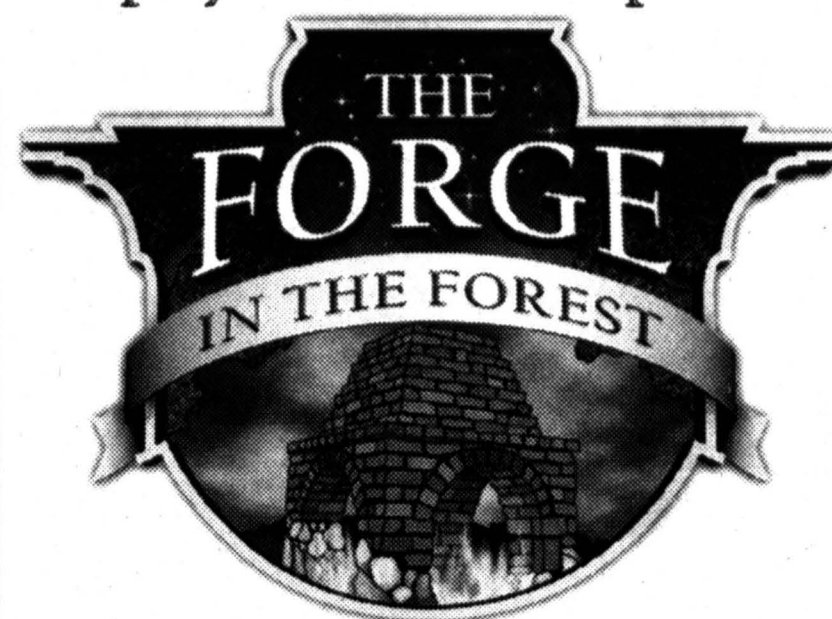

Rich and detailed costumes by Kathryn Hart come to life on the subtle but textured set, designed by Jean Francois Revon. Lighting at the Outdoor Forest Theatre is by RJ Wofford II.

Heads up — the show's started

It may have been the familiarity of the play or perhaps the outdoor venue that filled the seats to near capacity. Sitting beneath the stars on a crisp autumn night, with fires blazing, certainly creates an enchanting atmosphere. It also offers the opportunity to picnic. This, unfortunately, spilled over into the first 15 minutes of the play. Cell phones rang, (at least three, and one was answered), bottles were opened, and snack bags were rattled. A "10 minutes to show time" announcement may be in order to allow the audience time to prepare.

None of the disruptions seemed to bother the actors, however, and the play was met with warm applause. "Hath not a Jew eyes?" Don't miss the opportunity to judge for yourself. Quills up!

The highway dilemma

LOTS OF people were shocked at our lead story last week, "Highway 1 in for another big fix."

In particular, some readers were aghast at the revelation that more than a dozen homes might have to be torn down to make way for improved intersections at Ocean Avenue and Carpenter Street.

Without substantial improvements — four-laning the entire stretch of Highway 1 through Carmel and replacing traffic signals with overpasses — gridlock on the beleaguered highway as it passes through Carmel is inevitable in the near future, traffic experts say. Nothing short of major improvements will keep cars moving through the year 2030, they advise.

This news shouldn't have surprised anyone, however.

The decades-long debate over Hatton Canyon was not simply whether to build a highway through the canyon.

It was whether Carmel should be bypassed by a four-lane divided road through the canyon or the existing Highway 1 should be improved to get traffic moving.

Proponents of the Hatton Canyon route argued it was preferable to cramming a freeway into the narrow, home-lined corridor used by the highway now.

Opponents of the Hatton Canyon route called for preservation of the canyon as a park and bitterly denounced the proposed bypass as an "L.A.-style" freeway they said was inappropriate for Carmel.

Both sides agreed that things couldn't stay the way they were. "L.A.-style" traffic congestion would be the worst outcome of all.

The climbing lane, which opened earlier this year between Carmel Valley Road and Morse Drive, was a temporary fix to the most egregious traffic problem this community faced. Thankfully, the gridlock that beset the mouth of the valley every afternoon is a thing of the past. But motorists who use the climbing lane know it can still take a long time to get through the light at Ocean Avenue. As the years go by, it will take longer and longer.

Why? Not because of local population growth.

The number of new homes being built in Carmel, Carmel Valley, the Highlands and Big Sur is negligible, and will remain that way for decades, if not for centuries. The people who occupy those homes won't be to blame.

And it isn't exactly growing families that are adding to the highway congestion. All Peninsula communities are aging and the number of children in local neighborhoods is falling dramatically.

The 2000 census showed that Carmel-by-the-Sea, for example, has a smaller population today than it had in 1960.

Meanwhile, California is booming. Millions of new immigrants are pouring into the state from Mexico and dozens of other countries. In some demographic groups, there is a substantial baby boom underway.

And therein lies our traffic dilemma. Highway 1, which links Monterey Bay and Big Sur is (obviously) a major route for tourists. No matter how much the local, year-round population declines, the traffic on the highway will increase. What can stop it? Nothing. We are left trying to figure out how to deal with it.

Hatton Canyon has been turned over to the California Department of Parks and Recreation and, barring a major political reversal, will forever remain part of the parks system. The existing highway will have to be improved. This is not a very good solution. But it's the only solution.

Why I sued the monastery

Dear Editor:

Over the past 18 months, three articles have appeared in The Pine Cone (March 2 and May 18, 2001, and Feb 1, 2002) about injuries I sustained at the Carmelite Monastery and a lawsuit I subsequently filed. Although I have always considered the articles inaccurate and biased, distorted to serve sensationalism rather than truth, I have not spoken up before, because I have previously felt it was better not to call further attention to this matter. The articles, however, have never been far from my mind, nor, unfortunately, from those of others.

As the result of the negative publicity generated by The Pine Cone, I have been subjected to hate letters and outraged calls. I continue to encounter people who make insulting remarks to me in reference to the articles, in which I was presented as "litigious" [The Pine Cone insinuated that past litigation was personal, rather than suits connected with my business over many years and made light of my injuries (May 18, 2001)]. I am a person who has been in business on the Monterey Peninsula for 45 years, well known in my field, one in which trust and reputation are crucial. Overall, the manner in which my Monastery suit was repeatedly presented to the public by The Pine Cone was irresponsible and exploitative, resulting in a tarnished image that has lingered, hurting my character and standing within our community.

Today, I would like to set the record straight about this affair.

First, I have always had wonderful relationship with the Carmelite Monastery. This is as true today as it has been for many years. The nuns and I share mutual respect, understanding, and support. They know as well as I that I would never do anything that would harm them.

Second, when I fell at the Monastery, it was not the "trip" depicted in The Pine Cone. Major injuries to the entire left side of my body included a fractured shoulder and a broken toe. Given my age, recovery was slow and difficult. The Pine Cone omitted the fact that, for five or six months, I was bedridden with constant pain and required the services of a nurse. My husband, who had just opened a new business in Carmel, had to neglect his work in order to help care for me. The Pine Cone instead picked up my attorney's words, "loss of consort," to denigrate my husband's devotion. I was not able to dress myself, drive, or work. Later, I had to undergo extensive physical therapy for my arm. I have enclosed some photographs documenting my condition. My injuries have never healed completely, and I still have to deal with pain in my leg to this day.

Third, the Monastery repaired the broken step that led to my fall and filed a claim with its liability insurance carrier, SAFECO, to help me cover the expenses for my accident.

SAFECO, however, did not want to pay, electing to go to court instead, fully confident that no jury would go against the nuns at a trial. The Pine Cone headlines, "Carmel real estate agent sues Carmelite Monastery," "Monastery denies responsibility..." and "Monastery won't pay..." misrepresent the nuns' position. It was SAFECO who hired the attorney to defend the interests of the insurance company.

Fourth, my case went to arbitration where the legal issues were examined, and the arbitrator found in my favor, based on the facts presented. SAFECO was ordered to pay, but it still refused, insisting upon a jury trial, an arena where SAFECO hired attorney Melissa Kaufman was quoted by The Pine Cone as saying she hoped, "fact" (different ones from what the arbitrator had already considered before) would be able to prevail over law. When I learned of SAFECO's decision to take my case to court, I did not hesitate to say, "No." Not only did I feel it would be against my religion, but also against my ethics to subject the nuns to this.

Fifth, in the end, which has gone unreported by The Pine Cone, the lawyers for both sides "settled." SAFECO paid my legal and medical expenses. The medical expenses were what I asked for all along. The legal expenses were an unfortunate addition, the outcome of my having to address SAFECO's original refusal to pay my claim.

The Pine Cone articles implied that I pocketed a lot of money at the expense of the Monastery. I did not, and I hope I have corrected that impression. Once lawyers were involved, my claim took on a circus-like life of its own, performed by the lawyers and the insurance company. This spectacle was what The Pine Cone reported, not the true story of what really occurred between me and the Carmelite nuns.

Sandy Claws

LADYBUG POCHODYLO, 4, is a "Sonoran Terrier," according to Mom Vicki, who should know: She made up the breed, naming her for the Sonoran Desert near their home in Scottsdale, Arizona (another town noted for its dirth of ocean).

Ladybug's origins are not all that clear. She was only 9 months old when Mom and Dad fell in love with her at a Scottsdale foster home (Ladybug's fourth in just those first nine traumatic months). Now here in Carmel-by-the-Sea on vacation for the first time, Ladybug is trying to convince Mom and Dad John to move here. On her initial stroll on the Scenic Road walking path above Carmel Beach Wednesday morning, Ladybug was made welcome by no fewer than four Sandy Claws alumni, who happened to be passing during her interview/photo shoot.

Getting here was half the fun: Ladybug loves to go on trips with Mom and Dad, the car being her number one divertisement. Number two is home-made towel-in-sock tug-o-war playthings (she has about 50 now, which she keeps tidily in a box, bringing out only one at a time).

One day, Ladybug found a closet door ajar and soon made a thrilling discovery: A whole bag of 25 pigs ears! Ladybug managed to extract all 25 which she industriously hid around the house until she ran out of hidey-holes and just left them out in the open in a devil-may-care fashion. And then there was the time Ladybug, playing cobbler, artistically converted Dad's most expensive loafers into sandals, which was no small task, given Ladybug's underbite.

For the trip here, Mom made Ladybug a brand new scarf from scraps left over from Mom's dress making. They now have about 20 mother-daughter outfits. Ladybug was careful to pack several for her Carmel visit.

Dig out those old photos of Ocean Avenue

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL'S CENTENNIAL is coming up, and the committee in charge of celebrating the event is on a quest for historic photographs and postcards capturing the changing look of Ocean Avenue over the last 100 years.

The committee — recently appointed by Mayor Sue McCloud to create a year's worth of centennial celebrations in 2003 — plans to create a block-by-block visual history of Ocean Avenue.

Carmel recreation director Christie Miller said the committee will put together displays for each block of Ocean Avenue in hopes that every month at least one business per block will volunteer to put up exhibits.

Ultimately, locals and visitors strolling along Ocean Avenue will be able to catch a glimpse of how each block looked throughout the decades. Miller hopes the community will come through with some great snapshots of the town's history.

"People always tuck pictures away,"

Miller said. "We know there is a ton of stuff out there in the community."

Anecdotes and remembrances of Ocean Avenue are also welcome.

Miller said the committee is already planning its kick-off celebration in January. "Stay tuned," she said.

The centennial will celebrate 1903 — the year Frank Devendorf and Frank Powers began building in Carmel. (The city was incorporated in 1916.)

Marian and Glenn Leidig are the honorary co-chairs of the committee. Members include: chairman Buzz Hoever, Pat Sippel, Nicki McMahan, Sarah Berling, Erik Bethel, Lou Ungaretti, Mia McKee and Erling Lagerholm.

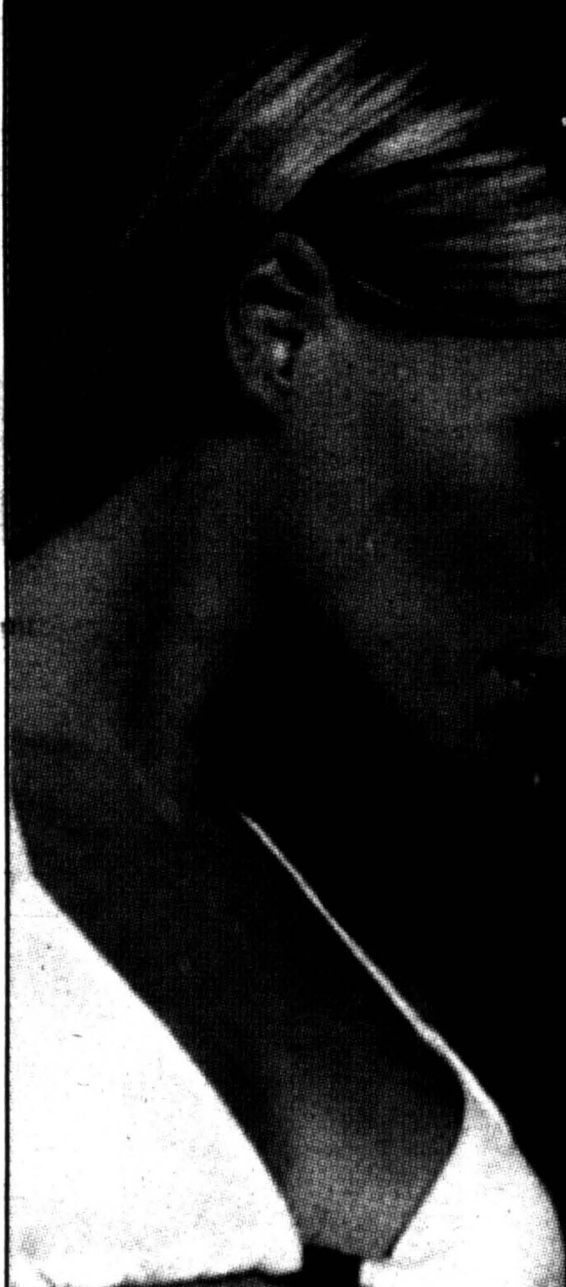

Citizens with Ocean Avenue history should call Sarah Berling at 624-0329 or Miller at 620-2020.

Demolished house yields valuable 'old growth' lumber

By TAMARA GRIPPI

FORGET ALUMINUM cans and newspapers. Carmelites Niels and Jan Reimers are recycling their house.

The Reimers, who received permission from the City of Carmel and the California Coastal Commission to tear down their 1920s-era home, are actually saving everything "that the termites haven't gotten," Niels Reimers said.

The bathtub, toilets, Carmel stone, bricks, doors, dimpled glass windows and the fine grain redwood used throughout the Camino Real home are all being carefully preserved.

The Carmel couple hired The Reusable Lumber Company of Woodside to take on the job. Owner Jim Steinmetz called the Reimers' house — his first Carmel project — a treasure trove of beautiful materials.

"That's the gold," Steinmetz said of a stack of the original exposed redwood ceiling beams removed by his crew.

Reimers explained that the house was constructed quite simply. "The walls are just redwood 1-by-10s, the batt in between, and air," he explained.

All of the redwood — including the siding and interior — is in particularly good shape, Steinmetz said.

"This is old-growth redwood, probably milled in the 1920s," he said. "You won't be able to buy wood like this again for another thousand years."

Steinmetz said the highly dense wood — free of any knots — was likely taken from the heart of the old trees, which has the finest quality grain. The trees were probably cut down in Big Sur, where giants were felled without a second thought in the 19th Century. Modern redwood for building comes from farmed trees, which grow quickly and yield much softer wood.

The Reimers plan to work with their architect Bob Littell and builder Chris Sawyer to select all the materials they want to incorporate into their new home.

They can then donate the materials they don't want to environmental non-profits in order to receive a tax deduction. Steinmetz set up the tax-deductible donation option for his clients in order to encourage more people to recycle their homes.

PHOTOS/TAMARA GRIPPI

Jim Steinmetz, owner of The Reusable Lumber Company, explains that these "recycled" redwood ceiling beams have a much finer grain density than lumber currently available.

The non-profits benefit from selling the materials back to The Reusable Lumber Company, which makes the vintage stone, brick, glass and fine-grain wood available to builders, homeowners and even universities.

The Reusable Lumber Company is one of the only house-recycling companies that takes apart homes "from top to bottom" by hand. The largest piece of machinery the crews ever use is a Bobcat. Each job takes about 20 working days.

struction and historic preservation, Steinmetz founded the company four-and-a-half years ago with his dad, Gerald.

In addition to houses, the company has been called upon to recycle warehouses and commercial buildings. Steinmetz said there is a growing demand for the stunning wood and other rare materials found only in older homes.

The Reimers saw an article about The Reusable Lumber Company in the Palo Alto Weekly and decided the wood and stone of their home were too beautiful for the scrap pile.

"It seems like the good ecological thing to do," Reimers said. "Maybe it's something they might want to encourage elsewhere."

PETITION

ence fall within the proposed Carmel Valley city limits between Highway 1 and the east end of the village.

If the six-month petition drive succeeds, LAFCO, with the assistance of C.V. Forum, would study valley incorporation in depth to see if it's possible. In order to incorporate, an area must be able to cover the costs of city government — including "revenue neutrality" payments to compensate the county for losing tax revenues generated by the area — without raising taxes. It must also promise its residents essential services, such as law enforcement and fire protection.

"The financial aspect and the service aspect are probably the most critical components," West said, adding that it will take about a year to find out the answers to those and other crucial questions.

Then, the incorporation of Carmel Valley will go before the commission for an up or down vote. The commission, which is independent of county government, includes two county supervisors (Lou Calcagno and Edith Johnsen), two mayors (Jerry Smith of Seaside and Anna Caballero of Salinas), two special district representatives (Tom Perkins for the King City Cemetery District and Anne McGowan for the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District) and one member of the public, Candace Ingram.

"The commission will move toward denial if incorporation's not economically or financially feasible," West said. "If it's possible, the commission may approve it and send it off to election. Then it's really up to the people within the boundaries to vote."

In addition to operating under guidelines currently being finalized by the State of California, West hopes LAFCO will adopt some specific procedures to handle the Carmel Valley incorporation application, including a timeline calling for several public meetings and workshops.

"I have had people call me and say, 'We want to be in,' or 'We want to opt out,' but they don't have anything to opt out of, yet," West said. Most of the calls are from people who fear a decision will be made without their knowledge.

With so much outreach in the works and a process that ends in the voting booth, West said, that's unlikely.

She also said the proponents of incorporation are optimistic they will not make the mistakes their counterparts have made in other efforts around the state, many of which took several tries before being approved.

"If you take the average of past incorporation efforts, doing it on the first try is very optimistic," West said. Marina became a city in November 1975, but only after three attempts during a period spanning more than a decade.

The agenda for the Oct. 9 meeting, to be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at All Saints' Day School at 8060 Carmel Valley Rd., includes informing the public about how C.V. Forum is gathering and sharing "unbiased information regarding incorporation issues," outlining the process that will enable voters to make informed decisions, and launching "the most critical information-gathering phase inviting widespread resident participation."

In addition to West, McMillan and board member Mike Carini will also speak, while former Monterey County Supervisor Karin Strasser-Kauffman will conduct the meeting.
